Unforgettable, rewarding and educational. Planting trees is an experience every child should have. A hands-on activity they will always remember and the perfect way to learn about nature.

ALLAN BAXTER/WTML

Connect your pupils with nature by planting trees.

A school planting project is an ideal way to show children about the natural world around them and make school grounds safer, cleaner, more engaging and more attractive.

JILL JENNINGS/WTML

Trees increase the wildlife that can be found in and around your school.

We did it!
You can too...

The children and teachers at William Shrewsbury Primary school in Staffordshire love our free trees so much that they have planted more than 350 of them over the last 10 years!

Since 2005 the school has successfully applied for 10 tree packs, creating hedges and copses to totally transform the once bare school grounds near Burton. And the staff and pupils are not done yet – their latest tree pack is on its way – ready for the next round of school planting.

Terry Morris/WTML

Lots of free supporting resources, including the Green Tree Schools Award, can be found at woodlandtrust.org.uk/schools

Woods and trees can be used to teach many subjects in the school curriculum and also provide outdoor learning areas and an exciting playground feature.

Trees offer shade on hot days and shelter from wind and rain. They screen perimeter fencing and can reduce pollution.

TRUST

What's the catch?

There isn't one!

We offer packs of trees with various mixes of trees to suit everyone.

Choose from small packs (30 saplings), medium (105 saplings) and large (420 saplings)

All saplings are native, UK grown and supplied 20–40cm high – the perfect size for establishing quickly.

Go online to see exactly what we can offer and find out what's best to suit the space you have available.

And that's not all

- All packs come with full planting instructions and free downloadable curriculum-linked resources.
- We also provide tree protection to help them establish more successfully.
- If you don't have room in your own school grounds we can help find land in your community where you can plant trees and make a difference.
- We can give you advice on which pack to choose and guidance with planting.
